nice looking copies!

By Jenn Lynn

The package came opened on one side. That side was slightly bent but it'll look just fine in a frame. That happened to me at Christmas when I bought saints medals. Thiefs must not like spiritual stuff. :). Otherwise, it's in great condition and came within the shipping window. Thank you!!!

Gorgeous facsimile pages from the world's oldest (near) complete Bible

By David deSilva

Codex Sinaiticus is the name that scholars have given to a near-complete copy of the Bible (Old Testament, most of the Apocrypha, New Testament, and two bonus Christian texts -- the Epistle of Barnabas and Shepherd of Hermas). The entirety is written in Greek, which means that the Old Testament follows the form of the text used by Greek-speaking Jews in the Diaspora (commonly known as the Septuagint). The codex dates from about 400 AD, making it one of the oldest and most important manuscripts for the study of the Bible.

This product offers facsimiles of two of the best preserved pages of the Codex. The first comes from Song of Songs, and features both red and black ink (I've not read it closely enough to figure out why the two colors are used -- it does not look, at first glance, to represent the different speakers in the Song); the second comes from the resurrection narratives at the end of John's Gospel. These are printed on good quality paper and are suitable for framing (they will fit in standard 16" x 20" frames). A perfect gift for someone interested in the history of the Bible, a pastor, a church looking for wall decorations that will spark inquiry.

Very nice!

By Dani

We framed these and hung them in the study. They look great and are very clear. My husband is a Ph. D. student in New Testament and he loves these!
